OCT 10, 1983

FULDA CROSSING

THE GUIDE TO BECOMING A CONTRIBUTOR

—NODESEC

This document shall constitute the authoritative procedural guide governing the eligibility requirements, application procedures, applicable standards, and conditions under which an individual may seek admission as a contributor to the development of The Fulda Crossing: 1983 (hereinafter referred to as "the Project"). All prospective contributors shall be subject to the provisions, requirements, and determinations set forth herein, together with any supplementary policies, directives, or amendments duly established by the Project's authorized administration. Submission of an application, participation in development activities, or the provision of any contribution shall not, in and of itself, confer upon any individual an unconditional right to contributor status, access to internal materials, or participation in any particular aspect of the Project.

For the avoidance of doubt, The Fulda Crossing: 1983 is an entirely fictional work, conceived and developed for creative, entertainment, and narrative purposes. Notwithstanding any resemblance to actual geographical locations, historical periods, military formations, political circumstances, governmental institutions, individuals, organizations, or events, whether past or present, no such resemblance shall be construed as an express representation that the Project documents, depicts, or purports to reproduce actual historical occurrences. Any similarities to real-world persons, entities, or circumstances are either coincidental or employed solely within the fictional framework of the Project. Accordingly, the Project shall not be represented, distributed, or interpreted as an authentic historical record or factual account of real-world events.

1. ELIGIBILITY THROUGH SOCIAL MEDIA

1.1. Eligibility and Method of Application. Any individual seeking to obtain contributor status in the development of The Fulda Crossing: 1983 may submit an expression of interest through such social media platforms as may be officially designated by the Project's administration. Such expression shall be submitted through the appropriate official account, community server, or other authorized communication channel. The applicant shall provide any information reasonably requested for the purposes of identification, assessment of relevant skills, and determination of suitability for participation in the Project.

1.2. Submission and Assessment. All applications submitted pursuant to Section 1.1 shall be subject to review by the authorized members of the Project's administration. Applicants may be required to demonstrate relevant competencies, provide examples of previous work, disclose applicable experience, or complete such additional assessments as the administration may reasonably prescribe. The submission of an application shall not constitute an offer of employment, a contractual engagement, or a guarantee of acceptance.

1.3. Standards of Conduct. Every applicant shall conduct themselves in a respectful, lawful, and professionally appropriate manner throughout the application process. Harassment, deliberate misrepresentation, impersonation of authorized personnel, fraudulent submissions, or other conduct deemed materially incompatible with the interests of the Project may constitute grounds for rejection. The administration reserves the right to request clarification, defer consideration, or decline any application where sufficient grounds exist to do so.

1.4. Determination and Admission. The determination to approve or reject an application shall rest with the Project's authorized administration. Successful applicants shall be notified through an appropriate communication channel and may be provided with further instructions concerning their duties, permissions, responsibilities, and applicable development procedures. Contributor status shall take effect only upon express confirmation by an authorized representative.

1.5. Reservation of Administrative Authority. The Project's administration reserves the right to amend application procedures, establish additional eligibility requirements, restrict access to internal resources, and revoke contributor privileges in accordance with applicable Project policies. No applicant or contributor shall be entitled to presume that admission, continued participation, or access to confidential development materials is permanent or unconditional.

2. ELIGIBILITY THROUGH DEVELOPMENT MEANS

2.1. Any individual seeking recognition as a contributor to the development of The Fulda Crossing: 1983 may qualify for consideration by submitting original work, technical implementations, creative assets, documentation, or other materials that materially advance the Project. Qualifying contributions may include, without limitation, programming, environment design, three-dimensional modelling, visual effects, sound design, narrative writing, fictional world-building, quality assurance, testing, and the identification or resolution of technical deficiencies. All submissions shall conform to the Project's objectives and applicable development standards.

2.2. All submitted work shall be subject to examination by authorized members of the development team, who may assess its originality, functionality, quality, relevance, and practical usefulness. Where reasonably necessary, an applicant may be required to provide source files, supporting documentation, demonstrations, revision history, or other evidence establishing authorship and verifying the validity of the submission. Submission of work shall not, in itself, entitle any individual to contributor status.

2.3. All contributors shall ensure that materials submitted by them are independently created, lawfully obtained, or otherwise authorized for use within the Project. The knowing submission of plagiarized materials, malicious code, unlawfully obtained assets, or unauthorized third-party intellectual property shall constitute grounds for rejection. Submission shall not, by itself, transfer ownership of any material to the Project or its administration. Any assignment or licensing of intellectual property shall be governed by a separate agreement where applicable.

2.4. Contributor status shall be conferred only upon express confirmation by an authorized representative of the Project's administration. In determining eligibility, the administration may consider the significance, consistency, reliability, and overall quality of an individual's contributions. Neither the quantity of submissions nor the completion of any single contribution shall guarantee acceptance, permanent membership, administrative privileges, or access to restricted development resources.

2.5. The administration reserves the right to reject submitted materials, request revisions, or decline their integration into the Project where such materials fail to satisfy applicable requirements. Contributor privileges may be suspended or revoked in cases involving plagiarism, deliberate sabotage, misrepresentation of authorship, unauthorized disclosure of restricted materials, or other conduct materially prejudicial to the Project.

2.6. All determinations concerning the acceptance of contributions and the conferral or revocation of contributor status shall remain subject to the authority of the Project's administration. Nothing herein shall be construed as establishing an unconditional entitlement to admission, recognition, compensation, ownership interests, or continued participation in the development of The Fulda Crossing: 1983.

3. CONTRIBUTOR RESPONSIBILITIES AND OBLIGATIONS

3.1. All individuals recognized as contributors to the development of The Fulda Crossing: 1983 shall be required to conduct their activities in a manner consistent with the Project's objectives, established development standards, and applicable internal policies. Contributors shall exercise reasonable diligence in the performance of their assigned duties and shall endeavor to ensure that all submitted work satisfies the requirements communicated by the authorized development team.

3.2. Contributors shall maintain appropriate standards of conduct in all matters relating to the Project and its administration. Harassment, deliberate disruption, malicious interference with development activities, unauthorized impersonation, and other conduct materially prejudicial to the Project shall be prohibited. Contributors shall comply with reasonable instructions issued by authorized administrators within the scope of their respective responsibilities.

3.3. Contributors shall ensure that all work submitted or integrated into the Project is original, properly authorized, and free from intentionally introduced malicious code or other harmful functionality. Any third-party materials incorporated into submitted work shall be used in accordance with the applicable licenses and permissions. Contributors shall disclose any known defects, security vulnerabilities, licensing restrictions, or other material issues that may adversely affect the Project.

3.4. Contributors shall not disclose confidential information, unreleased development materials, private communications, access credentials, or restricted Project documentation to unauthorized individuals. Such information shall be handled responsibly and shall not be reproduced, distributed, or exploited for purposes unrelated to authorized Project activities. This obligation shall extend beyond the termination of contributor status to the extent that the information remains confidential and the obligation is otherwise lawful.

3.5. Contributors shall communicate material development issues, foreseeable delays, technical difficulties, and other circumstances that may substantially affect their assigned responsibilities to the appropriate members of the development team. Where revisions, corrections, or additional work are reasonably requested, contributors shall make reasonable efforts to address such requests within the agreed scope and timeframe. No contributor shall knowingly misrepresent the completion, functionality, or quality of their work.

3.6. Contributors shall respect the intellectual property rights of other individuals and entities, as well as any ownership, licensing, or usage arrangements applicable to the Project. Contributor status shall not, by itself, confer ownership of the Project, authority to represent its administration, permission to publish unreleased materials, or authorization to enter into agreements on the Project's behalf.

3.7. Failure to comply with the obligations set forth herein may result in a warning, a request for corrective action, temporary suspension of access, removal of submitted materials, or revocation of contributor status, depending upon the nature and severity of the violation. Any such determination shall be made by the authorized administration in accordance with applicable Project policies. Nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring contributors to remain active indefinitely or prohibiting them from voluntarily discontinuing their participation.

4. TERMINATIONS, AND FINAL PROVISIONS

4.1. Contributor status may be terminated voluntarily by the contributor upon notification to the Project's administration through an appropriate communication channel. The administration may likewise terminate, suspend, or restrict contributor status where circumstances warrant such action, including prolonged inactivity, repeated failure to comply with established requirements, breach of confidentiality, misconduct, or other conduct materially prejudicial to the Project. Where appropriate, the administration may provide prior notice or an opportunity to remedy the relevant deficiency.

4.2. Upon termination of contributor status, the individual concerned shall cease exercising any permissions, privileges, or access rights granted exclusively by virtue of such status. The administration may revoke access to internal repositories, development environments, communication channels, documentation, and other restricted resources. Termination shall not, by itself, determine the ownership of previously submitted materials, which shall remain subject to any applicable agreements, licenses, and intellectual property rights.

4.3. The Project's administration reserves the right to interpret, revise, supplement, or replace the provisions of this document where reasonably necessary for the continued development, management, or protection of The Fulda Crossing: 1983. Any amendments shall take effect upon such date as may be specified by the administration. Contributors may be notified of material changes through official communication channels and shall be responsible for reviewing applicable revisions.

4.4. This document shall be interpreted in conjunction with any applicable Project policies, contributor agreements, and authorized administrative directives. In the event of an inconsistency between this document and a separately executed agreement, the relevant agreement shall govern to the extent of the inconsistency, subject to applicable law. No provision herein shall be interpreted as overriding any mandatory legal requirement.

4.5. The provisions contained herein establish the general requirements governing contributor admission, participation, conduct, and termination within The Fulda Crossing: 1983. Administrative decisions made pursuant to this document shall remain within the authority expressly granted to the Project's administration. Nothing herein shall be construed as creating an employment relationship, guaranteeing compensation, or conferring ownership, partnership, or other legal status upon any contributor unless expressly established by a separate agreement.

4.6. By accepting contributor status, each individual acknowledges that they have been afforded the opportunity to review the applicable requirements and agrees to comply with the provisions governing their participation. Questions concerning interpretation, eligibility, permissions, or administrative decisions shall be directed to an authorized representative of the Project's administration.

4.7. Should any provision of this document be determined to be invalid or unenforceable under applicable law, such determination shall not affect the validity of the remaining provisions to the extent that they may lawfully remain in effect. This document shall constitute the general administrative framework for contributor participation in The Fulda Crossing: 1983, subject to any applicable agreements and mandatory legal requirements.

FULDA
CROSSING
1983